THE THIRD SUNDAY OF ADVENT

Over and over again, we hear of men and women doing what we all thought could never be done. The world is full of stories where the seemingly impossible becomes possible. We should feast on such stories because they can help nurture our sense of what is possible in life. Our readings today are filled, not with what men and women can do, but with what God can and does do in our world. God makes the wilderness into a garden, opens blind eyes, cures deaf ears, gives courage to the cowardly, sets the oppressed free, makes the lame walk, cleanses the lepers and even raised the dead. God can make all things new. This is what we celebrate today. Now the trick is to take that wonderfully hopeful idea and allow it to enter our communal and individual world. The saints were not afraid to imagine a world that was different from the world in which they lived. When we simply sit back and accept what is because that is all we know, and are not able to imagine how things could be any different, then nothing much is going to happen. If a community has no vision of how to move into the future, it seems highly doubtful that God is going to use that community to bring about any needed changes. God needs hearts and imaginations that are open and unafraid.

Thoughts to reflect on and share: "Like flowers that bloom in the desert and fruit in parched lands, even the emptiest and driest of hearts can be overcome by patience and love. During this Advent season, like a farmer tending his fields, we need to patiently tend to those who feel alone and empty and let them know just how welcome and loved they really are."
